How To Choose Wedding Shoes

It should go without saying that stylish shoes are one of the most important wedding accessories a bride to be will need to purchase. A lot of thought has to go into choosing the right footwear as they will determine whether she will be walking down the aisle in comfort or agony. It doesn't matter whether the bride decides to go for a more classic look or even jewel encrusted flip flops the most important aspect is that they complement the wedding dress and provide long lasting comfort throughout the big day.

Bridal shoes are chosen so that they match the style of the wedding dress itself. There is a wide range of shoes types and styles so it is understandable if you find it difficult to narrow down your choice! If you are looking to go for a more elegant look then you may decide to go for shoes which are free of flourishes and embellishment. On the other hand, if you are looking to go for a trendier, more contemporary look then you may decide that an evening sandal is more to your taste.

These different types of bridal shoe choice will of course differ depending on the various dress styles and fabric types. Wedding shoes are also made from different materials such as cotton, velvet, lace and even plastic. There are as many different types of shoes as there are materials: flip flops, open toe, sandals, flats, platform and of course - stilettos. If you are looking to wear heels then they will come in a range of heights so you can be as tall or short as you want.

It's a common occurrence that a bride to be will end up making a poor choice when it comes to her wedding shoes. The most frequent mistakes occur when the wedding gown is bought without giving due consideration to the heel height of the shoe. Even worse, it can be easy to forget that shoes will shrink if they are being dyed. It sounds like an obvious piece of advice, however you should always try your shoes on during the dress fitting as this will help to not only avoid shoes sizing errors but it will also help you to judge whether they complement the dress and don't look out of place.

If you are trying to organise your wedding to a tight budget then you will no doubt be looking to save a bit of money on your shoes and dress, areas which are traditionally some of the most expensive. It may be a good idea to shop at some traditional high street wedding boutiques and once you have found the ideal shoes for you it could well be worth searching online to see if there are any internet retailers who will stock your wedding shoes at a lower price. It is important that you don't rush the decision of choosing your shoes as you will want to make sure that you are as comfortable as possible when you walk down the aisle on your big day!
