Fashion can be confusing when it changes so frequently, which is why we've put together this guide to take you through the top summer 2011 fashion trends for men so you can find them all in one place. For instance, one brilliant trend for summer 2011 is the military look. If you want some designer inspiration then check out Chanel, Superdry and Paul Smith, but more generally you should keep an eye out for crisp tailoring, earthy colors and military-style boots.

The preppy look is also set to be a big trend for men in summer 2011. This is great as it's also set to be huge into fall and winter, so anything you buy now you'll be able to wear again, such as by layering summer tees with winter knitwear when the weather gets colder. In particular, the American preppy look is massive right now. Keep a watch out for colors such as pale pink, blue and green, as well as tailored blazers and great tees with subtle patterns.

In terms of office wear, the summer 2011 trend for men is all about relaxed suits – great news when the weather is warm as you don't want to be walking around in a sweltering ensemble. This season, forget 'skinny' trousers as the trend is for 'carrot-shaped' suit trousers. Team these with an unstructured blazer. Then you could either wear a plain shirt with a bold tie, or perhaps forgo the tie and wear a bold shirt instead – either way, you'll look great.

Jeans are also very big for summer 2011, which is great news for those days when the weather isn't what you'd hope it would be. Skinny jeans may have been huge for the past couple of years, but this year it's all about seventies' style bell-bottom jeans. You don't need to go for a massive flare but something wider than usual would be great. Then team your flared jeans with a white tee and sandals for a look that will be completely perfect for the beach in summer.

Lastly, you'll also need some great footwear to complete your outfit. The preppy and military trends seem to be inspiring the men's summer 2011 shoe trends, so watch out for them. In particular, check out the fantastic range of military-style boots and shoes. When it comes to the preppy trend, you can't go wrong with suede this season. The bright colors will make you stand out and there are some great suede sneakers about that are ideal with jeans or smart trousers.
